1. The Risk Disclosure will only mention incidents and possible risks that occur frequently. Therefore, this document will not cover all market occurrences that the Client may encounter when trading and performing monetary transactions with the Company. The Client hereby accepts all possible results he/she may endure.

2. The Company provides investment products to legally competent clients in jurisdictions that authorize trading services. The services include trading in financial markets where the Client obtains property of an underlying asset such as stocks, cryptocurrencies, Contract for Differences (CFDs), Foreign Exchange (Forex), and Exchange-Traded Funds (ETFs).

3. CFD trading is obtaining a contract to reduce the spread of an asset. Through trading CFDs, the Client trades on a leveraged margin that may significantly impact his/her trading account, whether positive or negative. Therefore, the Client is responsible for his/her trading account's equity regardless of the outcome and accepts the risk of enduring a higher loss than his/her invested funds.

4. Leveraged market products are complex instruments that involve a significant risk of losing funds. More than 70% of trading accounts experience capital loss when trading CFDs. The Client hereby confirms that he/she has an ample understanding of the market considering the significant risk of enduring capital loss.

5. Rapid price movements cannot be guaranteed whether it will be in favor of the Client or not. The Client understands and accepts the concept of price slippage or market gapping that may occur when trading CFDs and other leveraged products, causing a drastic price shift in an underlying asset.

6. The Company cannot and does not guarantee the future performance of any asset. The financial market and its leveraged products can rapidly fluctuate, resulting in unforeseen adversities beyond the Company's control. The Client accepts that any market product can affect his/her investments regardless of the Company's provided market information.

7. Before using the Company's trading products where liquidity is not guaranteed and can be more difficult to liquidate, the Client must consider his/her trading objectives, level of experience, and risk tolerance.

8. The Company's trading and service conditions are set in line with its relevant regulations and might not be adjusted according to the Client's needs. The Client understands that the trading products may vary significantly from the actual underlying market or instrument.

9. Currency exchange and cryptocurrency hold higher trading risks since they are more dynamic and often volatile and unpredictable. These assets are considered extreme, and the Client should not invest money more than he/she can afford to lose.

10. Margin requirements are essential in maintaining an efficient trading operation. The Client must ensure that his/her trading account meets the Company's margin requirements, which can be changed by the Company when it sees fit.

11. The Company reserves the right to increase the Client's capital on short notice to meet the margin requirements and retain his/her open trades. The Company can execute the following actions if the Client does not comply with the margin requirements:

A.) The Company can close or gradually stop open trades to minimize the floating loss from the variable profit:

B.) All trades can be closed to avoid a more significant loss or if the margin can no longer hold them.

C.) The Company may close or restrict the Client's access to the trading account if the margin is excessively negative, where the Company must take partial control to avoid further damage.

D.) Whether intentional or not, the Client opens too many trades that his/her margin cannot handle, the Client will be liable for settling the accumulated margin requirements.
